INTRODUCTION

This plan was prepared by the City’s Cultural Affairs Commission and Cultural Services Division staff over the past year and one half. The Cultural Affairs Commission started work on this plan in January 2014.

Since that time citizen surveys have been conducted online and in paper format. The surveys were analyzed, three community meetings were held, and information was obtained from various arts organizations in Aurora.

HISTORY OF THE PROJECT

The previous Community Arts Plan was approved by City Council in September 1993. A group of citizens spent two years with a professional consultant developing the twenty year Plan. It was common at that time for cities to develop long range plans. The 1993 Plan contained nine Goals that for the most part have all been achieved in some manner except for the one related to “Where the Arts Occur”. The City does not have a centralized major arts facility where a number of arts and cultural activities can take place at the same time. Arts organizations still have difficulty finding a venue in Aurora that will accommodate their needs.
The nine Goals in the September 1993 Plan cover a variety of the areas where a need existed.

One of the primary Goals was to create a citizens Arts Commission that would assure the City’s commitment to the arts and create a City Cultural Arts Department.

- The Cultural Affairs Commission was created by City Council in 1994 to implement the Plan.

- The City also created the Cultural Services Division of the Library and Cultural Services Department in 2003 to provide a focus on the further development of the existing arts and cultural programs.

The number of arts programs has expanded as new arts organizations and artists have located in Aurora.

- This has allowed for collaboration and cooperation on programs that serve the citizens in the ever expanding City limits.

- Arts organizations are programming better to accommodate the citizens’ needs as they respond to surveys and requests from the community.
Another Goal that has been very successful was the adoption of an Art in Public Places Ordinance in 1993 and the creation of the City Council appointed citizens Art in Public Places Commission that implements the Ordinance.

- Dawn Ring in front of the Central Library was installed in 1982 before the Ordinance was approved. The art piece was selected by the Director of the Library and a few citizens.

- Since the installation of the first Public Art (under the 1993 Ordinance) in 1997 at the Saddle Rock Golf Course there are 240 plus pieces with a value of $3 million in various parts of the City.

- The location of the City-owned Public Art is publicized in a Collection Guide and on Social Media sites.

- The Art 2C on Havana project is co-sponsored by the Havana Business Improvement District to place loaned art on the Havana St. corridor. It has been a great collaboration and an excellent way to promote art for all to enjoy in unique locations.

The main ways the City promotes the Arts and Cultural amenities available in Aurora are:

- The Your Guide to Aurora’s Cultural Events published 5 times per year lists as many activities, programs, and events as possible. It is available in all City public facilities and on the City’s Website.

- Many of the arts organizations share their information with each other and cross promote their events and programs.

- Social Media
The Major Goal that has not been achieved is the development of a major centralized cultural arts facility capable of having several events occur simultaneously, and that has both indoor and outdoor areas for performing along with many appropriate classroom spaces for all the art forms. This Goal appears in the Plan in several categories.

- There was a six year professional study that lead to a Bond issue for a small arts facility that failed in 2002.

- The Aurora Chamber of Commerce, Business for the Arts Committee has gathered information periodically over the last 10 years from various organizations to assess their needs for such a venue so that it can be updated when needed.

EXECUTIVE SUMMARY

The goal was to prepare a five year Cultural Plan that would identify what the arts need now in Aurora and how they can grow and develop to become an even greater asset to the Aurora community. Hundreds of cities and counties across the country have prepared cultural plans as they have acknowledged how the arts help preserve a community’s past, forge its present identity, enrich its quality of life, and enhance its economic vitality. The future of the arts and culture in a community is too important to leave to chance and planning is essential.

In recent years due to the fast changing technology and demographics, many cities are now doing three to five year plans instead of the long range plans.

After sifting through all the data, the key issues were identified. The Cultural Affairs Commission and staff drafted Goals to respond to these issues. Objectives, or the general ways to achieve the Goals, were drafted. For each Objective the Commission determined Action Steps, Resources, and Potential Implementers. Then a Timeline was established.

1. What is the best way to inform you of the arts and cultural activities in Aurora?

2. What types of arts and cultural classes, programs, and performances should the City’s Cultural Services Division offer that are currently not offered?

3. Since facility space for arts and cultural classes, programs, and performances is scarce in Aurora should the City build a multi-purpose arts facility to accommodate the population growth? If yes, what are your creative ideas about how to fund it?

4. Only some schools in Aurora provide arts classes for all grade levels to encourage creative thinking and problem solving skills? Who should advocate for all schools to incorporate the arts into the curriculum?
PUBLIC INPUT - SYNOPSIS

It was suggested that there should be 7 points of contact to get the word out about Cultural Arts in Aurora.

Suggestions - banners, create a recognizable symbol to draw people to the event, speak with members of other committees to keep them informed, create some type of coupon that could be used to help introduce the public to different events such as combine dinner with a show, or give away 1 ticket with the purchase of 1, use print and social media. Do outreach to some of the churches, Homeowners’ Associations, etc.

Most of these suggestions have been used in the past.

Determine the resources needed – staff time, funding, etc.

Set-up an Advisory Committee to evaluate the effectiveness of the Marketing and Public Relations methods.

An Arts and Cultural Facility has been an issue that needs to stay in the plan. Maybe one site could be converted into a Cultural Facility. It’s important for a facility to be easy to find and have good parking. Several studies with private consultants have found that there is a need for people with money in Aurora as well as private/public collaborations to make this a possibility. Educate City Council on the Arts/ Cultural programs to put together in one major venue. Set up sub-committees to refine the discussion.

Encourage businesses to sponsor and donate. Provide them with benefits for sponsorships.

There is a need to re-energize the Arts community.

A goal may be how to better engage City Council and community organizations to see enhancement in the Arts, the value of Arts venues, the opportunities the Arts brings to the communities.

An Arts/Cultural Website is needed for information about Arts and Cultural programs that would be a calendar listing of all these programs and events in Aurora (Denver and other cities have one). Each organization would be responsible for entering their information. But who will monitor the Website for updates?

A task force is needed to see which goals are possible and which ones should wait.

Alice Lee Main, Cultural Services Division Manager, gave the attendees her contact information if they have further input or ideas.
It was suggested that different methods of communication work for different audiences. Families get information at children-related activities. Empty nesters rely on community organizations such as churches. Twenty to thirty year olds rely heavily on social media. Most of these suggestions have been used in the past.

Send Aurora arts activities information to Colorado Public Radio and Colorado Matters that provide a weekly rundown of upcoming events in the Metro area. The lack of entertainment reporters in the local media is an issue for all Metro arts and cultural organizations. Include a statement in the Objectives about continuing to send the Aurora Recreation Guide to every home in Aurora as it is a proven method of reaching potential audiences.

There were no ideas for any new classes, programs, etc. It was suggested to have the Poet Laureate provide programs in the schools.

Facility space is an ongoing struggle to meet the needs for appropriate adequate space for arts activities. Because there is no single large facility or group of smaller facilities devoted exclusively to arts classes, the Aurora Cultural Services Division relies heavily on recreation centers as venues for holding classes, programs, etc. The recreation centers are already bursting with their own activities and classes. The cost of arts classes is more due to the need to pay for the evening staff in the recreation centers when there are no other classes scheduled. The City has so many other needs for facilities such as indoor sports facilities that any arts facilities in the near future is very unlikely.

In order to provide programs to the schools it is necessary to rely on grants to fund these programs.

The City needs some fresh leadership at the top level of City Council and City Management to spearhead arts activities.

Alice Lee Main, Cultural Services Division Manager, gave the attendees her contact information if they have further input or ideas.
It was suggested by the founder of a Charter School that flyers and the Cultural Events Guide should be printed in Spanish because there are so many Spanish speaking parents in Aurora. But it was also noted that there are hundreds of other languages spoken in Aurora and that only selecting one language could become a political issue. Word of mouth and Social Media were both suggested as a means to communicate arts activities to the public. The City Website should have a link where bi-lingual information can be found by citizens.

An Arts and Cultural Facility is an issue that needs to stay in the plan. But it was suggested that it include space for artists, engineers, and other creative groups to lease space and have the ability to collaborate and connect. It should have enough lease space to expand and become a place to foster creative industries. The facility and creative space should be in southeast Aurora near the Buckley and Alameda/Mississippi area.

Alice Lee Main, Cultural Services Division Manager, gave the attendees her contact information if they have further input or ideas.
